After Easter

By: Kurt Mach

They probably looked as dumbfounded as they felt, standing there looking up because of what was... at nothing in particular now. All of them may have thought, "If I hadn't been here I wouldn't have believed it."

After more than three years of extraordinary life with Jesus they thought they were ready for the unexpected. Nothing could have prepared them for His torture and execution. Despair overwhelmed them like a tsunami. Then, in the midst of hopelessness they were vaulted back up higher than they could have imagined, like a giant, cosmic bungee jump recoil. For more than a month they walked with Him again as He reinforced what is most important about life. Then He rose into heaven right in front of them and was gone.

Staring up without looking at each other Peter said for them all, "What now?"

"I am so wiped out I don't know if any of my thoughts are valid" Thomas replied.

They had no idea how long it had been since He'd vanished from sight when a voice they didn't recognize said from among them, "What are you looking for?"

His followers turned and saw two men dressed entirely in white standing with them. As they looked on in amazement the one speaking continued, "You saw Jesus taken up into heaven. He, Himself will return to you just like you saw Him go."

They looked around to each other, and then realized the two strangers were gone.

Peter repeated himself, "So now what?" Silence presided for several minutes.

Finally John said, "What's the last thing He said to us?"

"I remember" Luke said. "The same thing He told us when He appeared after the two guys came back from Emmaus."

Together as one they turned and started walking back to Jerusalem to wait, for what they weren't sure.

We should also be looking heavenward in anticipation of whatever may be revealed to us as His followers. We too should know we need the power of His Holy Spirit to live our lives as evidence of His love. We still need to know that His promise is to us together, as His body, and fully expect Him to fulfill it as we live according to His commandments. He will do His part. Let's live in our commitment to do ours, depending on Him and on Him in each other.
