Seasons

By: Kurt Mach

As summer 2018 moves toward fall, what's your favorite season; winter, spring, summer or fall?

God is really into seasons. I doubt He has a favorite, having created them all on purpose. His creation has so much very distinct variety, none of it without relevant purpose.

I admit I like spring and fall the most. They are both sort of in between, a type of bridge from one season to another. They both carry with them something of the former married to the promise of what is to come. With the four seasons, as much as anything in God's creation we are reminded that this too shall pass. We're not stuck in any of them. In fact, we can't prevent them from moving on.

But climate and weather, tied to the movement of our Solar System are not the only important seasons God presents us with. Ecclesiastes 3:1-8 identifies many. God has also ordained seasons of rest. Our attempts to force Hot House seasons of productivity may not be as fruitful as we like to think in the scope of eternity. Is anything outside of God's creative ways an improvement?

At this time of year, I cannot help but think of ordained seasons of learning. For anyone engaged in the school system in any way; parents, students, teachers, family schedules, traffic and so many others – the next new year does not begin January 1, but rather with the start of school.

However, we are never supposed to retire from learning. The Infinite God has spread out before us an infinite amount of stuff we don't know yet, and not just academic knowledge – but the inexhaustible knowledge of who God is as well. Here, too there are seasons of rest, but... the prospect of learning and receiving more of who He is always awaits us in the next season of learning.

More of God is always new. I invite you to lift your eyes to the horizon and beyond in anticipation of when He will reveal and invite us into more of the wonderful life He created
